Presidential Message

I would like to extend a warm welcome to all of our readers and take this time to thank all who attended the 89th Annual General Assembly in Peace River, AB. It was a successful weekend with a strong attendance for both the Youth and Rights conferences. During the Business Meeting, constructive conversations were had around Special and Ordinary Resolutions and many new ideas were brought forward.

As we leave behind the summer months and head into a busy fall we look forward to celebrating Métis Week during November. Métis people played a leading role in the development of the City of Edmonton as fur traders, voyageurs, merchants, and craftsmen, while continually shaping the cultural landscape of this great city today.

Events will be held November 13th to 18th, and I encourage everyone to join in the celebrations of recognizing the outstanding contributions of Métis people and our rich Métis culture.

Highlighted in this issue of the Otipemisiwak are Métis business owners. The talent and motivation of these entrepreneurs, is a testament to the limitless potential of Métis ingenuity in Alberta's economic landscape and within our community.

With the year coming to a close, I look forward to seeing everyone at our Special Meeting and Community Christmas Party, December 16, 2017.

2017 has been a ground-breaking year for the Métis Nation of Alberta and I am optimistic 2018 has much more in store.

Developing a Métis Consultation Policy

Key highlights from meeting with Métis Nation of Alberta and Minister of Indigenous Relations

Métis Nation of Alberta representatives meeting with the Government of Alberta to discuss an Alberta Métis Consultation Policy

On October 6, 2017, leaders from the Government of Alberta and the Métis Nation of Alberta (MNA) met to begin discussions for an Alberta Métis Consultation Policy. “The meeting is a significant milestone forging a strengthened Nation to Nation relationship” stated the President of the Métis Nation of Alberta, Audrey Poitras.

She continued, “It has been a long time coming. We are excited to get the discussions officially started and begin developing a consultation policy for the Métis Nation and the Province. Crown consultation is about respecting and protecting rights and for far too long the Métis in Alberta have not been consulted. Jointly developing this policy will mark a new era of Crown-Métis relations in the province.”

The MNA has advocated for policy requiring consultation with Métis people for decades. The development of this policy was identified in the Métis Nation of Alberta - Government of Alberta Framework Agreement signed on February 1, 2017. The Framework Agreement outlines how the MNA and Government of Alberta will work together to facilitate the recognition and respect of Métis rights in Alberta, uphold the honour of the Crown, and advance reconciliation.

In his presentation, the Minister of Indigenous Relations, Honourable Richard Feehan, focused on Alberta’s priority initiatives related to Métis consultation. Specifically, launching a dialogue on potential legislation on Indigenous Consultation and a policy on Métis Harvesting. The Minister further outlined his intent to conduct consultation, understand barriers experienced by Métis citizens, and understand Métis peoples’ connection to the land and their role protecting it. Minister Feehan also highlighted the importance of creating a mechanism to provide legislative feedback.

A Métis consultation policy that works for both the Government of Alberta and the Métis Nation of Alberta is crucial for the province’s future. The policy will allow Alberta’s lands and resources to be developed ensuring the Métis Nation, as a distinct Indigenous people, can flourish creating prosperity for the Métis Nation and all Albertans for generations to come.

INAC Announcement

INAC is dismantled and two new departments are introduced

On Monday, August 28, 2017, Prime Minister Trudeau announced the dissolution of Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada (INAC) with the creation of two new departments; the Department of Crown-Indigenous Relations and Northern Affairs, and the Department of Indigenous Services.

Carolyn Bennett will now serve as the Minister of Crown-Indigenous Relations and Northern Affairs and former Health Minister Jane Philpott will become Minister of Indigenous Services.

A statement on Prime Minister Trudeau's website details the ministerial changes:

"The new Minister of Crown-Indigenous Relations and Northern Affairs will guide the Government's forward-looking and transformative work to create a new relationship with Indigenous Peoples...The Minister will also be tasked with better whole-of-government coordination on our nation-to-nation, Inuit-Crown, and government-to-government relationships. The new Minister of Indigenous Services will continue the important work of improving the quality of services delivered to First Nations, Inuit and Métis people."

In a personal message to INAC employees, Trudeau explains that, "We need to shed the administrative structures and legislation that were conceived in another time for a different kind of relationship."

The Métis Nation of Alberta (MNA) is optimistic about the changes as they are modelled on recommendations from the 1996 Royal Commission on Indigenous Peoples, which included a chapter on the Métis. It is also important to note, although this recent announcement is a positive start, much more work is still needed to build a successful nation-to-nation, government-to-government relationship between the Métis and the Canadian Government.

Honouring the Garneau Tree

Hundreds of community members gather to farewell an important mark of Métis heritage

On Friday, September 15, 2017 community members and descendants of the Garneau family assembled at the University of Alberta to celebrate and honour the legacy left behind by Laurent Garneau and his wife Eleanor; the historic Garneau Tree.

With hundreds of people gathering around the historic Manitoba Maple, the intimate ceremony touched not only on the prominent impact Laurent and Eleanor Garneau had on the Métis community, but also included personal memories and stories shared by family descendants.

Speakers of the ceremony included President of the MNA, Audrey Poitras, MNA Minister of Culture, Duane Zaraska, artist and professor, David Garneau, Annette Rondeau, Métis Elder, John McDonlad, Métis Veteran, community members, and University of Alberta representatives.

Brianna Lizotte fiddled throughout the ceremony bringing life to this historic celebration in Métis history.

Although, as of September 17, 2017 the Garneau Tree no longer stands on the University of Alberta grounds, the Garneau family and community members will continue to remember the legacy left by Laurent and Eleanor Garneau. Pieces of the Manitoba Maple have been saved by the Garneau family and community members and plans are underway so that they may be used to carry on the memory and history of the Garneau Tree.

Deb Fiddler

Métis armwrestling champion

Deb knew she was hooked on armwrestling after winning her first official tournament during her high school years. She competed against four girls and beat them all. When looking back at old photos, she can't help but laugh, "[I didn't] even have the right stance or anything."

In preparation for qualifying and attending multiple World Championships, Fiddler uses her expertise as a Canada Post worker to build her immense grip strength. To open the airmail and lock bags, there is a strong twist tie that can only be removed with pliers. The constant motion of squeezing pliers is what gives Deb the strength and power to go up to the tables and crush the competition, as well as her opponent's hand.

2017 Armwrestling Championship Gold & Silver medals

Armwrestling gives Deb the camaraderie, confidence, and discipline she wants to share with the Métis community.

While filming for Arm Nation, a docu-series coming next year to APTN, Fiddler says she feels "proud that we're finally being recognized as people in the community and it shows that anybody can [armwrestle]."

"They have the Mi'kmaw games in Nova Scotia for aboriginals to do these armwrestling tournaments, and I thought hey, why can't I have that here. I'm thinking that way I can get more involved in the community."

In her most recent tournament at Nationals in Halifax, with around 395 competitors, Fiddler placed 2nd with her right arm in the Master class (40 yrs and older). During the same competition, she also placed 1st in the Grand Masters (50 yrs and older) with her left arm.

Fiddler says armwrestling is always a "nerve racking and fun" experience, which she continues to pursue both as a competitor and as a Level 1 Referee.

Deb winning against USA in 1998 World Championships

The largest armwrestling hubs in Alberta can be found in Edmonton, Calgary, Red Deer, and Grand Prairie; all ages and abilities are welcome.

Louis Riel

History of a Hero

Every year during Métis Week, we join on two notable occasions to honour the legacy left by our leader, Louis Riel.

The week of celebrations opens with the Louis Riel Commemorative Walk. For this event, community gathers to walk 6.6 kilometers in honour of Riel's family and friends who carried his casket 6 miles in the harsh Manitoba winter to St. Boniface to lay him to rest.

A New York Times article published December 14, 1885 describes the procession:

"To show the great esteem in which the deceased rebel was held, his people bore his remains upon their shoulders all the way from St. Vital, almost 6 miles. The names of the pall bearers were: Benjamin Nault, Chas Nault, Elie Nault, Posper Nault, Pére Harrison, W.R. Lagimodiere, Louis Blondeau, Romain Lagimondiere, Norbert Landry, Roman Nault, Alfred Nault, Martin Nault, André Nault, Louison Desrivieres, Francis Poitras, Joseph Lagimodiere, St. Pierre Parisien, Francois Marion. Red colored sashes encircled their waists. They wore a white sash each across their shoulders and breast."

Riel was hanged in Regina and as per his dying request, his body was returned to St. Boniface to be buried next to his father.

On November 16th, we gather at the Alberta Legislature at 11am. On this date, at this time in 1885, Louis Riel was executed. His trial began on July 20th and lasted a total of four days. While he was in prison awaiting trial, Riel penned a letter to his friend, Doctor Romuald Fiset, which indicates his optimism:

Trial of Louis Riel, 1885

Louis Riel's funeral in Saint-Boniface, Manitoba

Louis Riel's Council 1870

"My quick surrender has contributed, I think, to a greater hope for the Metis to have peace, and has done them good, I presume... I humbly ask not to be treated as a murderer and not to be ironed before the jury have pronounced. And I am confident they will find me not guilty."

The jury determined Riel to be guilty of treason. However, they requested mercy from the judge. No such mercy was granted and Riel was sentenced to death on August 3, 1885.

It is these historical events, and all Louis Riel's heroic actions, we keep present in our minds when celebrating Métis Week. On the page 11, you will find an extensive schedule so you and your family may join us in the celebrations and honour this rich Métis history while looking optimistically to our future.

Riel's Composition

Recently, the Métis Nation of Alberta came into possession of a long un-translated and un-published poem penned by Louis Riel. Writer, historian, artist, and translator, Michael Barnholden of Roberts Creek, British Columbia, translated the eight-verse poem and it was published this summer by The Capilano Review.

Composition de Riel

Il faut rendre célèbre
Ce triste champs des morts,
Salut place funèbre
Où j'aperçois trois corps.
Ces disponibles mortelles
Feraient verser des pleurs
L'amentons-nous pour elles
Dans leur derniers malheurs.

En les voyant – j'éprouve
Une sentiment d'effroi
Un corps humain se trouve
Toujours le corps d'un roi
L'homme est roi par son âme
Et ses idées d'honneurs
Nous savons que la femme
Est reine par son coeur

Victimes de la guerre
Je vous plains je vous vois
C'est moi qui les enterre
Au bout de trois longs mois
Vous appelez la rage
La grande faim des loups
Assez longtemps l'orage
S'est abbatu sur vous.

Mille a su vous surprendre
Mais vous en retraitant
Vous avez bien su rendre
Le souffle en vous battant.
Vous avez vu la poudre
Eclater avec bruit
Et comme un coup de foudre
Se plonger dans la nuit.

Le bronze de batailles
A déjà fuit hélas
Pour vous des funeraillles
Il a donné vos glas
Vous avez eu la gloire
De mourir en guerriers
Le jardin de l'histoire
A pour vous des lauriers

Oh! que ma main est fière
D'inhumir des héros
Quand l'air frais la poussière
Vient carreser leurs os
Tu me prête ta bêche
Jérôme pour ouvrir
La terre dure et sèche
don't il faut les couvrir.

La 7ieme marque

Nous sommes trois personnes
Pour en enterrer trois
Nos sympathies sont bonnes
Et louables je crois
Daniel Dumas, tu creuse
Leurs fausses avec moi
Mes pensées généreuses
Doivent parler de toi.

Puisque ta femme Elise
Vient t'aider jusqu'ici
Il convient que je dise
Un mot pour elle aussi
Que la Bon Dieu vous fasse
Ainsi qu'à moi Riel
D'heureux jours et la grace
De parvenir au ciel

Riel's Composition

We must celebrate
These sad fields of death
Salute this funereal plot
Where I see three bodies
Those deathly remains
Make our tears flow
We cry for them
In their final agony

Seeing them I am stricken
With feelings of horror
The human body is
Always the body of a king
Man is king because of his soul
And his ideas of honour
We know that woman
Is queen because of her heart

Victims of the war
I see you and I pity you
It is I who bury them
For three long months
You survived their rage
The great hunger of wolves
Since the fury of the storm
Came down upon you

You were surprised by thousands
But you are in retreat
You have done very well
You are still breathing
You have seen the gun powder
Explode like thunder
And like a cannon shot
You plunge into the night

Those with battle medals
Have already fled alas
For you there are funerals
Your death bell rings
You have the glory
Of the death of a warrior
In the garden of history
Your laurels await

Oh let my hand be strong
When I bury our heroes
While the air cools
Before their bones are dust
Lend me your shovel
Jerome to open
The hard dry earth
A final cover for them

The 7th part

We are three
To bury three
Our thoughts are good
And honourable I believe
Daniel Dumas you dig
Their graves with me
My thoughts are generous
When I speak of you

8

Since your wife Elise
Came to help you here
It is right that I should say
A word for her as well
May the good lord give you
As well as me Riel
Happy days and grace
When we reach heaven

Carvel Electric

Q&A with Métis brothers Joel and Jordan Jolicoeur

Carvel Electric has been a Métis family owned and run business since 1997. We spoke to brothers Joel and Jordan Jolicoeur (Vice President and Acting CEO, respectively) to find out more about Carvel Electric, their Métis culture, and any words of advice for those wanting to be successful entrepreneurs.

How is it running a family business?

Jordan: Me and Joel have really great dualities on how we approach business and it's been a really good relationship.

Joel: Our family has a pretty great dynamic and we all get along. Why would you not want to do business with your family, they're your family and if it benefits them, it benefits you.

How has being Métis impacted your business?

Jordan: What we are trying to do is build a team of Métis or Indigenous electricians. I think the advantage of creating that culture of an Indigenous work force is that everybody wants to be apart of growing something, or growing a company that is a strong

Indigenous business, and it's really good for creating moral and team building.

Joel: It shapes where we are going and where we come from. When we started, we thought we just wanted to wire houses and then we realized that there was the Canadian Council for Aboriginal Business (CCAB www.ccab.com) to get involved with. They create a platform for businesses to get together and figure out ways to promote Aboriginal businesses within Non Aboriginal businesses.

What challenges have you faced in taking on this role of business owners?

Jordan: I think the challenge, just because of the economy in the last few years, has really been just trying to acquire new clients in a really tough climate and we've had to get really creative and we've had to become very good business men and bring lots of value to a client that they maybe weren't seeing before. We had to structure our business to be very aggressive and find value for our clients.

Joel, Jordan & Sylvio (Father of Joel & Jordan) at the Carvel Electric office in Stony Plain

Where do you see Carvel Electric in five years?

Joel: I think we'll be one of the employers hiring the highest number of Métis and First Nation people. Seeing our company hire as many Métis and First Nation people as possible provides a place where people can come to work and not be worried about their surroundings and being judged because I know that's an issue for people when they go to work. If we could eliminate that kind of atmosphere and create our own, I think that's where I see our company going.

What advice do you have for those wanting to be successful entrepreneurs?

Jordan: For me, I would say why do you want to be an entrepreneur and what do you want to achieve in your life? Find out what your direction in life is and then say, is being an entrepreneur going to help me achieve that goal?

You have to have a goal at the end of it and if it's just to own a business for the sake of owning a business, then I'd say maybe reflect on that. Understand where you're trying to head in life first.

Joel: Similar to what Jordan was saying, you need to figure out your priorities and the life you want to live. You have to enjoy what you're doing.

Carvel Electric, as a nominee last year for the Eagle Feather Award, part of the Alberta Business Awards of Distinction (www.abbusinessawards.com)

Has the Métis culture always been a part of your life growing up?

Jordan: Oh absolutely. Our dad at any time, if you could let him speak Michif or explain his family tree or talk about his upbringing, he always tried to make sure the Métis culture was in our family. As I get older I start to respect our culture more and more so I can thank our father for that and instilling those values and wanting to carry on our Métis heritage.

Joel: The Métis people are proud of their culture; especially the younger generation. They want to be apart of something.

Jared Blais, R.A.P student from Stony Plain Memorial Composite High School

We heard you had an office bowling team called the Expendabowls?

Joel & Jordan: We are the defending champions of 2016-17 and have been doing this for four years. We play Wednesday nights in a mixed league with four players.

Our strategy is to throw the ball and knock down as many pins as possible and looking really good while doing it because we have sweet jerseys. It adds intimidation factor, which all adds to the strategy. It's funny because we actually take bowling very seriously.

Lost and Found

Nicole Prokopiuk's journey to self-discovery and entrepreneurship

As a child, Nicole Prokopiuk was always curious about her Métis heritage but grew up divided from it.

"There was so much shame around it growing up in my family, there was a lot of negative around being Indigenous," Nicole recalls.

Unfamiliar with her culture, Nicole never really felt at home. Originally from Winnipeg, she spent many years moving around Canada and living overseas, but never settled down.

That is, until she had the chance to connect with her heritage. Nicole met and spent time with two women who she credits with changing her life. One from the BC Association of Aboriginal Friendship Centres and the other from North East Métis Association, these Elders introduced Nicole to the part of herself she had yearned for.

"It has helped me feel a sense of understanding who I am."

"One of the biggest things for me in life in terms of my own healing and growth was learning about [my] heritage. I never really was whole. I was all over the place, I was moving around and so not grounded in life. It has helped me feel a sense of understanding who I am," mentions Nicole.

Feeling more grounded, Nicole found her home and her passion here in Alberta. She spent many years working with at-risk-youth before taking a leave of absence earlier this year to start her own business.

With training in beading and other traditional crafts, Nicole had plans for a studio that not only sold her hand-made goods, but educated and engaged at-risk youth in aspects of Indigenous culture. However, Edmonton commercial rent was far beyond her budget so she had to think outside the box. From this road block, Out of the Blue Mobile Boutique was born; a fashion truck traveling to markets and events selling hand-made jewelry, accessories, and homewares.

"It solves a lot of business issues in terms of location and other factors and after initial startup, your ongoing costs are so small in comparison to running a retail space," she says.

Nicole initially set out with a two-year plan: set up the truck, operate it for a year at markets and events, then, in 2018, open a studio and store front as a base for teaching crafts and employing Indigenous youth. But, features on CBC Radio and the St. Albert Gazette helped spread the word about her unique store and to Nicole's surprise, she was fully booked all summer, quickly selling all of her inventory.

"My goal is ultimately to train and employ as many Indigenous youths as I can. I really believe in the power of opportunity."

Now plans for the store front have moved up to this fall and she is currently looking for a space in St. Albert. While she has plans to sell goods in the store, her main priority is working with at-risk Indigenous youth.

"My goal is ultimately to train and employ as many Indigenous youths as I can. I really believe in the power of opportunity." Additionally, Nicole also hopes to facilitate a community service program so that youth can serve part of their sentence learning traditional crafts.

Since its inception, the truck has run in to its fair share of road blocks, but Nicole remains focused on her passions and goals stating, "I'm doing what I'm doing because I have to. It's what I dream about, think about, it's something I need to do... for anybody that has the passion or desire, just do it. [T]here's so many struggles and so many things that make me want to pack it in or quit but it's fighting through that and reaching out and connecting, it's asking for help when you need it."

Gwin Communications

Elevating Indigenous voices

After almost a decade of work for the City of Edmonton, Shani Gwin decided to go it alone. She started Gwin Communications in 2016 and specializes in creating communications strategies for Indigenous communities and organizations. Gwin credits her Métis heritage with her professional success. "It's a part of me that I've really felt connected with, I've always been raised knowing who I am," she explains.

Indeed the Gwin family is deeply involved in Indigenous efforts; her father Lloyd Gwin works with the Métis Nation of Alberta (MNA) affiliate, Rupertsland Institute and her mother is the CEO of Niginan Housing Ventures. Even though she was raised with this strong identity, Gwin still encountered challenges. "I didn't grow up in a [Métis] community, a lot of the time people were like 'you're aboriginal, so where are you from?' 'I'm from here,'" she recalls, laughing.

Shani Gwin, owner of Gwin Communications

Since those days, Gwin has created ties with a range of Indigenous communities and given her extensive experience working for the City of Edmonton in Indigenous Relations, she is highly sought after.

In just a year Gwin Communications has worked with a range of Indigenous organizations such as, the Alexis Nakota Sioux Nation, the First Nations Health Consortium, and the Aboriginal Professional Association of Canada.

With her studies starting out in teaching, this line of work wasn't always in Shani's future, although she always knew she wanted to make a difference. Scholarships and study grants provided by the MNA and affiliates helped Gwin through her post-secondary education. She was the recipient of the Belcourt Brosseau Métis Award and participated in the Metis Employment Centre's Labour Market Program, now offered by Ruperstland Institute. "I wouldn't be where I am if it weren't for a lot of the opportunities that were provided to me in school. That made things a lot easier," she explains.

Fast forward almost a decade and Gwin has built a successful career doing work that gives her a sense of purpose. As a mother, Gwin understands the importance of changing the conversation around Indigenous narratives in the media for future generations. "Those are all really important issues to me I still want to work on them and still want to be able to help as many people as possible," she says.

For others looking to pave their own professional path, Gwin stresses the importance of utilizing available services. She implores others to "Really take advantage of... all these learning opportunities. There are so many free ones for Indigenous groups. Take full advantage. Attend them and learn what you can, ask a lot of questions."

As Gwin's entrepreneurial journey continues, her gaze remains fixed in her two biggest priorities; helping Indigenous communities tell their stories and raising her daughter. "Before she gets old, I want to be at home more... Before she's 16 and doesn't want to hang out with me," she laughs.

In Memoriam

Remembering Gail Johner

With great sorrow, the Métis Nation of Alberta bids farewell to Gail Johner.

On September 17, 2017 we lost a family member. For 21 years Gail Johner worked at the MNA's Region 4 office alongside President Cecil Bellrose. In fact, the two started on the same day. Cecil describes Gail as the "backbone" of operations in this region adding, "she was the best thing to happen to the Region 4 office."

Throughout her battle with cancer, Gail continued her work ensuring everything at the office ran smoothly. Cecil recalls with a laugh, "she wouldn't go on short term leave because she didn't want someone new to come and mess everything up."

Those that knew Gail describe her as a hardworking, shy woman who was kind to everyone.

"Nobody ever said a bad word about her. She's really going to be missed," adds Cecil.

Gail leaves behind her three children, Robert, David, and Cindy, two grandchildren, Cali and Jackson, and three siblings, Kathy, Joanne, Brenda. Her brother Ronnie passed away in 2008.

Gail's daughter Cindy is also a valued member of the MNA Region 4 office.

Remembering Thelma Chalifoux

The Métis Nation of Alberta was deeply saddened to hear of the passing of Thelma Chalifoux. Thelma was a champion for Métis rights and a valued member of the Métis community.

She was the first Métis woman to be appointed to the Senate of Canada and served for seven years. Following her retirement, she founded the Michif Cultural and Research Institute (now Cultural Connections) in St. Albert, which works to protect and promote Métis culture in Alberta. In addition to these amazing achievements, Thelma was a recipient of a National Aboriginal Achievement Award and was very active within the Métis Nation of Alberta. She also sat on the MNA's Elders Senate and was an elected Zone 4 official. She leaves behind a legacy of activism and culture but also a better world, say her loved ones. Her obituary reads, "she uplifted spirits - changed hearts and minds for the better and left this world a far better place than when she found it."

In a fitting celebration of Thelma's life, more than 100 people gathered at a traditional Métis wake in St. Albert on September 27th.

The MNA would like to extend our deepest condolences to Thelma's family and friends.

Remembering Oscar Lacombe

On August 1, 2017, we lost an admirable member of our community. Oscar John Joseph Lacombe was a proud Métis veteran who served in the Korean War as well as tours with NATO and United Nations Peacekeeping.

Born April 29, 1929, Oscar Lacombe was raised on a farm, seven miles from St. Paul, Alberta. As a child, family friend James Brady helped foster a strong sense of Métis pride and identity for Oscar. This pride would prove useful in the face of discrimination, which began in his early school days. Oscar recalls "Just about every day I would get into a fight. At that time, it wasn't very popular to be a half-breed. But I was very proud that I was and I was ready to fight to protect . . . myself and my kid brother. I got pretty good at [fighting] because it was called survival."

Oscar's aspirations for travel and affinity for the less predictable lead him to enlist in the Canadian Armed Forces in 1949. One year later, Oscar was deployed to Korea with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps in logistics, primarily transporting ammunition and supplies to infantry units. Oscar returned safely from Korea and continued serving with NATO and the United Nations Peacekeeping completing missions in numerous countries, such as Egypt, Lebanon, Syria, Palestine, Congo, and Cyprus. During his military career, Oscar rose through the ranks, eventually attaining Regimental Sergeant Major. Oscar's army uniform was donated to Métis Crossing and can be viewed there in the Veteran Museum.

Reflecting on his time with the army, he says, "It molded me into a person who respects his country, who serves his country, and a person who is proud to be a Canadian."

Oscar is a true embodiment of Métis pride and hard work. He will be greatly missed.

Oscar Lacombe, Métis Veteran

Home, Heart, Herb...

A poem written by Andre Morriseau in memory of Herb Belcourt

The world is earth molded into futures where one day dust will fly again
With memories of those who aspired to build
With kindness and handshakes, smiles and determination
They build the nation
That the future holds in place
For tomorrow's yet come
Thy Kingdom Come

Men of ages of memories told
Strong with fresh ideas, we all grow old
What is left, what still shines
The legacy that binds
Minds together, growing prosperity for their children's children
Celebrating culture and tradition
A man on a mission

We celebrate a life's work of a beloved man
Family, friends, business and community
From books to civics and that helping hand
His memory like the wind sweeps the land
That he so loved, that he so shared
His deepest thoughts are with us now
As new tomorrow's dawn over a special park

A place of peace, joy and calm
This great man is never gone
Just resting, smiling on the world he touched
Much thanks, but not good bye
We celebrate with wonder this man in the sky
We wonder why, but we know
Forward in the shadow of strength we all follow.
